Collect incentive payments for housing SSI recipients

Under federal law, individuals who are incarcerated cannot receive Social Security benefits. The Social Security Administration (SSA) offers incentive payments to state and local correctional and certain mental health institutions for reporting information about confined or incarcerated people that:

- Results in the suspension of Social Security Income (SSI) payments to people whose confinement began in March 1997 or later; or
- Results in the suspension of Social Security retirement, survivors, or disability insurance benefits to people whose confinement began in April 2000 or later.

For every Social Security or SSI recipient who is suspended as a result of information provided by the participating institutions, SSA will pay the institution:

- $400 for information received within 30 days of the confinement.
- $200 for information received after 30 days but within 90 days of confinement.

How Can Appriss Help?

Appriss can create a monthly report for your agency to submit to the SSA for incentive payments. It works like this:

- Appriss implements a process for you to send the required fields of entry code, processing code, report type, facility identification code, and reporter identification code.
- The data from these fields are integrated with the existing jail booking information Appriss receives.
- The resulting file containing all the required data fields will be sent to your agency in the required format for uploading to the SSA's eData Web site. (The report cannot be submitted by a vendor.)
- Your agency will receive incentive payments from SSA based on those inmates who were collecting SSI benefits.
