

Drivers can now get crash reports online

Saves time of going to police station

Feb 01 2012

MIAMI -

There is a bit of good news today for those who unfortunately got into a car accident.

The state of Florida is putting crash reports online.

The Florida Highway Patrol sent out a news release on Wednesday saying that accident victims can now go to www.buycrash.com and purchase and download copies of accident reports. The FHP said the service will eliminate the time and gas needed to go to a local police agency to get the report.

The state boasts that the new service will cut costs, while delivering convenience and helping improve traffic safety. Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles Executive Director Julie Jones said, "Harnessing new technology to enhance customer service and to create efficiencies is in line with the agency's strategy."